The North American Hardwood Marketplace 2018 Mid-Year Update

Part II of II

Supply

This purpose of this article is to offer a perspective of the supply/demand balance for US hardwood lumber through the midpoint of 2018. Using data currently available, this assessment of supply is substantially different than if the article had been written two months earlier. It is equally assured this article is different than if it was written two months later. There is little doubt the supply situation has changed since the start of the year, and it is changing still.

The fact that supply circumstances are shifting – specifically, increasing – is not a surprise. The marketplace has been in need of additional volume for more than two years when, in fact, sawmill production remained flat (Figure 1).

VOLUME 12 ~ ISSUE 8 ~ August 2018

- Real average hourly earnings for US employees advanced to $10.76 in June, +0.1% over May but unchanged from June 2017.
- US manufacturing capacity utilization was 75.5% in June, up from 75.0% in May and 74.8% in June 2017.
- US rail carload traffic rose 1.3% in the first five months of 2018 over 2017. Intermodal traffic advanced 6.1% for the same time period.
- In the first half of 2018, China's GDP grew at an annual rate of 6.8%.
- Per capita disposable income in China grew 8.7% in the first six months of 2018 over the first six months of 2017.
- Through mid-July, 2018 US oil prices were up on average 31.9% over 2017.

cles when investment experts believe economic softness began for China, and how pervasive the downturn is.

"As business to China began to fade, many exporters explored other international markets only to find either intense competition from other vendors doing the same, or inadequate demand to absorb the volume of lumber no longer being consumed in China."

A weaker Chinese economy triggered the downturn in hardwood business activity in 2018, at least for grade lumber. Figure 1 shows how important China is to key US-produced species. The Chinese marketplace purchased 51.4% of all US hardwood grade lumber exported during the first 10 months of 2018, including 87.7% of Cherry, 72.5% of Red Oak, and 72.1% of Ash.

US companies spent $4.4 billion on import tariff payments in September 2018, up from $2.9 billion in September 2017. This according to a study by the Trade Partnership, an anti-tariff consulting firm, on behalf of the Tariffs Hurt the Heartland campaign. The study also found that US exports of products subject to retaliatory tariffs by other countries were 26%, or $2.5 billion, lower this September than last.

The Trump Administration has planned to raise tariffs on hardwood lumber and a host of other wood products imported from China from the current rate of 10% to as high as 25% on January 1, 2019.

Market Overview

North American markets for tropical hardwood lumber performed well during the last 30 days, according to surveyed importers and distributors. Reports were decidedly more upbeat from contacts in the East than in the West, which was in sharp contrast to the previous two months. Several import sales operations have decent order files for the last six weeks of the year, while others expect business to be
